

Subject: The Truth About Too-Big-To-Fail Banks and How They Control The Market

Dear [firstname];

I just got off the phone with Pete. My ears are still ringing from the assault!

Here's how he started, "Tom, I'm really frustrated with this Forex Market. I mean it's F#@kin' Totally Manipulated. I get Long and they stop me out on the downside! I get Short and the f#@kin' thing reverses back higher.

I am soooo tired of the banks that control this market.

I know you do well because you understand the way these scumbags think - being an ex-Bank Trader yourself."

Honestly, I didn't know if this guy was complimenting me - or insulting me! (I'm a laid back kinda' guy and I'll take this one as a compliment).

Turns out Pete had been trading for 8 months. So, naturally I asked him what the experience has been like so far ...

"Tom, like I said these banks are out to get me; never mind my corrupt broker - that's another issue. I've lost $85,000 in 8 months.

I want my money back now!

My wife is furious about this. She told me from the beginning this whole business was a scam!? Now I have to hear about this every night. She keeps asking did I make any money back?

It really has put a strain on our relationship. I need to learn how to play this game so I can get my money back!"

That's when I confided in Pete (name changed to protect the guilty!) - Trading is not a game. It's a huge business, and I hope its clear by now this could be one of his problems!

I then asked Pete, "Pete, where did you lose most of your money?" He said that he traded GBPUSD and EURUSD 90% of his time trading. I then asked him does he watch the EUR/GBP cross at all?

He replied, "Why should I care what that Currency does"? (Pete obviously didn't understand The Cross is not a specific currency; but a way to take the USD out of the equation).

Are you following all this?

Now, Pete honestly believes he's a technical trader. When I asked him what criteria he used to draw his Trendlines he said, "I use gut feel; Its the best way to draw those lines."

$80,000 lost in 8 months? I beg to differ.

This is where it gets a little iffy. I then went on to try and convince Pete that no Banks or Brokers control the market. Sure, they see order flow - but that can change in a millisecond!

That's when I told him to, "Get over yourself"! You think I was being a little harsh? The market, and the proverbial "they" don't exist.

If Pete truly wanted to EARN his money back, he needs to do two things:

1. Forget all that he thinks he knows! (It's not working for ya' buddy)
2. Commit to learning the Basics

In order to be a well-rounded Trader, and develop good market timing - you need to understand the basics. You can't understand a more technical set up without understanding the relationship between the currencies. Its a simple process you can master in 3 days, but if you want to profit in Forex there's no getting around this one.

These Basics that I teach could've saved Pete $80,000 in trading LOSSES, and God Knows what other punishment his wife has unleashed upon him!

Now everyone of us had to learn to crawl before we could walk. So it stands to reason that in Forex, we need to have a thorough understanding of the Basics, before we can become consistently profitable in our trading.

Not like Pete.

Cheers,
Tom

P.S. I beg of you - don't be like Pete. There's only room for one dog in the dog house!
